ECF membership cards

With the introduction of the new membership scheme in 2012 the ECF moved to administrating the scheme primarily through electronic communication. As a result we no longer communicate with the majority of our members via the traditional postal service, although this year members for whom we do not have an e-mail address will receive a subscription reminder by post. A further consequence is that we no longer issue membership cards to players.

Members who wish to have an ECF Membership card may print one by logging in to their ECF Membership account on the PaySubsOnline system here. This facility is available even if your subscription was not paid on-line, provided we have a record of your e-mail address. The instructions are on our website here

A brand-new WCM

Congratulations to Akshaya Kalaiyalahan of Nonsuch School in Surrey who has qualified for the WCM title at the 2014 Olympiad in Tromso by virtue of her 50% score for the England team. Ironically, she had also recently qualified for the title when her rating went over 2000 for the first time.

Akshaya was the 2013 joint British Womens Champion as well as the 2013 British Under 12 and 2011 British Under 10 Champion, not to mention winning British Girls titles in the U11, U12 and U14 age groups. She will be representing England at the European Youth Championship in Batumi, Georgia from 18th-29th October 2014 in the Under 14 girls section.

This year the choice is between three books which reflect different aspects of historic giants of the game, offset by a vibrant collection of attacking games by a master of the genre.

Aron Nimzowitsch 1928 - 1935 Annotated Games and Essays

Rudolf Reinhart (Ed) New in Chess £29.95

Nimzowitsch is remembered not only as a great player but the author of two of the most influential chess books ever written "My System" and "Chess Praxis" (see Petrosian below). Reinhart collected over many years all the games, annotations and articles played or written by Nimzowitsch during the last seven years of his life that he could find. The blurb describes the contents well "The unauthorized sequel to My System and Chess Praxis" A historically valuable book, which also contains much stimulating and opinionated writing that is worth reading today.

Mikhail Botvinnik The Life and Games of a World Chess Champion

Andrew Soltis McFarland £29.99

The "Father of Russian Chess" was a man of many contradictions who lived (and survived) through the turbulent history of Russia in the last century as well as the poisonous politics of the Stalin decades. How he did this and became world champion is the subject of Soltis's book rather than deep analysis of Botvinnik's games. Soltis who speaks Russian has undertaken much research to try to understand the background and has written a fascinating biography of one of the greatest chess players of all time.

Petrosian Move by Move

Thomas Engqvist Everyman Chess £19.99

According to Kasparov, Petrosian had a very distinctive style, the key to which even the greatest players could not locate. Engqvist has made a determined effort to find it in this excellent selection of 60 best games of a much underrated world champion. Detailed annotations provide clues, but one of the answers might be that the first chess book Petrosian read was Nimzowitsch's Chess Praxis.

Sacrifice and the Initiative in Chess

Ivan Sokolov New in Chess £21.95

The author states in the preface "that this is a book I have wanted to write for a long time". He spent a long time selecting and refining his material to reflect his true subject, the intuitive sacrifice. Sokolov writes fluently and as an attacking GM himself he understands both the technical and human aspects of playing this way. A delightful book that both instructs and entertains at the same time.

Tournament Round-up

2014 County Championships finals

The 2014 ECF County Championship Finals Day was played on Saturday, 12th July at the Trident Centre in Warwick. 7 matches were played, involving over 200 players. You can download the complete PGN here here

Essex won four out of four Under 100 Championships, but failed to qualify for the Final Stage this year. In their absence, Warwickshire and Kent qualified for the Final and were convincing 8 - 3 winners.

Nottinghamshire made it to three Finals, the most of any county. The Under 120 Championship was their only successful Final, as they beat Hertfordshire 7 - 5.

When the Under 140 section was created in 2010, Hampshire won the first two competitions, and made it back to the Final this year to play Nottinghamshire. The two teams were very evenly matched, but Hampshire prevailed 9 - 7.

Yorkshire and Middlesex met in both the Under 160 Championship Final and the Open Final. The Under 160 Final was a 10 - 6 win for Yorkshire, who were victorious on 6 of the bottom 7 boards.

Warwickshire had home advantage in the Under 180 Championship, but were nevertheless outgraded against Essex. The match was live with two boards remaining, but Warwickshire won both to secure a 9 - 6 win.

Nottinghamshire's route to the Final of the Minor Counties saw them beat Leicestershire three times before meeting Suffolk. Suffolk fielded three juniors on the top three boards, and Alan Merry and Justin Tan on boards 1 and 2 hold the FIDE Master title. They won their games as part of a 9 - 6 win for Suffolk.

The Open was a comfortable win for Yorkshire, 11 - 4. Yorkshire outgraded their opponents, but the result was unexpectedly one-sided. It was their first win since 2009. All boards of the Final were broadcast live on the Internet via the ECF website for the first time.

I would like to thank Andrew Zigmond, the Controller this year in his first year in the role; as well as the team of David Sedgwick, Sean Hewitt, Thomas Thorpe, Matthew Carr, Bruce Holland and John Philpott for providing assistance in various capacities on Finals Day. I would particularly like to thank all of the captains, whose endeavour over the course of the season has enabled over 1000 people to participate in these Championships at the Union Stage, and I hope they all return to the competition next season.

1st Bristol Summer Congress

The 1st Bristol Summer Congress was held August 22nd - 24th at our new venue at Bristol Grammar School. There were 73 competitors in 3 sections, though space would have been comfortable for 120.

The winners were -

Open - Steve Dilleigh, despite being outgraded by 30-35 points by the top 2 seeds.

Major - Alan Papier there was no cry of foul play that the organizer actually won his section.

Minor - Nikhil Hakeem 9-year-old Nikhil also won the Minor at Kidlington in February, and is one to watch for the future!

A Tale of Two Halves

Jonathan Hawkins made the early running in the British, but he was caught after a late spurt from the defending champion, David Howell

Jonathan Hawkins is a player whom you might not have heard too much about since the publication of his acclaimed Amateur to IM. Indeed, it feels like quite some time since 'the Hawk' made his second GM norm and established himself firmly in the 2500+ ranks. However, Hawkins's strength most certainly hasn't diminished, as shown by his performances on top board for Cheddleton in the 4NCL, even if his ambition may have waned a little after moving to London.

It was no surprise to see Hawkins as the early club house leader in Aberystwyth; ruthlessly demolishing sub-2400 opposition with close to a 100% success rate has long been one of his main assets. In Wales he displayed his intent as early as the opening round, employing the Geller Gambit (1 d4 d5 2 c4 c6 3 $\mathbb{Q}f3$ $\mathbb{Q}f6$ 4 $\mathbb{Q}c3$ dx c 4 5 e4). That has a slightly dubious reputation these days, but was clearly designed to make his 2100-rated opponent uncomfortable and, indeed, Hawkins won in just 23 moves. More good practical and aggressive chess followed as Hawkins outcalculated Ravia Haria (see this month's Find the Winning Moves) before he had to face three more rising stars.

Bicester's Marcus Harvey is never intimidated, plays quickly himself to try and create some pressure, and has a fine tactical eye, but he found Hawkins in grandmaster-like positional mode and never really saw a tactical chance. Next up on top board was the 16-year-old Australian FM Justin Tan, who studies at Woodbridge School, where he is taught chess by Adam Hunt, and made an IM norm in the 4NCL. Hawkins's opening may have been offbeat, but he reached the desired unbalanced middlegame and then attacked with some verve.

J.Tan-J.Hawkins
Round 4
Ruy Lopez

1 e4 e5 2 $\mathbb{Q}f3$ $\mathbb{Q}c6$ 3 $\mathbb{Q}b5$ $\mathbb{Q}ge7$

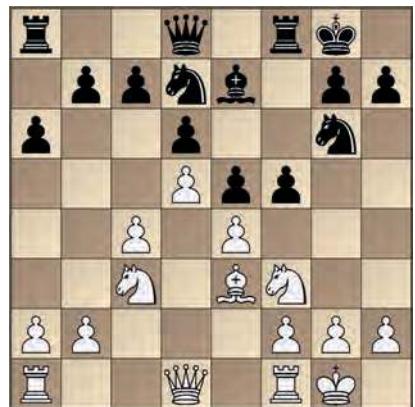

The Cozio Defence. One wonders if Hawkins had picked up a copy of Alexey Dreev's latest book for the long journey to Aberystwyth.

4 c3 a6 5 $\mathbb{Q}a4$ d6 6 d4 $\mathbb{Q}d7$ 7 0-0 $\mathbb{Q}g6$
8 $\mathbb{Q}e3$ $\mathbb{Q}e7$ 9 d5

This all feels very logical from Tan.

White accepts the loss of tempo with his c-pawn, but takes play into an Indian structure where the absence of light-squared bishops should be in his favour.

9... $\mathbb{Q}b8$ 10 $\mathbb{Q}xd7+$ $\mathbb{Q}xd7$ 11 c4 0-0 12 $\mathbb{Q}c3$ f5

Black's main break, but also one which gives White control of the e4-square. The alternative is 12...h6 13 b4 $\mathbb{Q}f6$ 14 h3 $\mathbb{Q}h7$, heading for g5, as in Melia-Harikrishna, Gibraltar 2011.

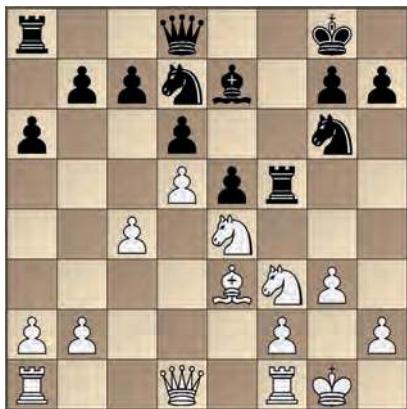

The six third-place finishers receive their prizes: (from r-l): Ravia Haria, Mark Hebden, Nick Pert, John Emms, Richard Pert & Keith Arkell.

13 exf5 ♜xf5 14 ♜e4 ♜f4!?

Hawkins attempts to stir up some trouble on the kingside, but Tan is able to drive the knight away while retaining control.

15 g3 ♜g6

16 ♜g2

This can hardly be terrible, but one has to wonder what Hawkins would have done after the logical 16 ♜fd2 followed by arranging the c4-c5 break. The position simply looks like an ideal King's Indian for White.

16...♝f8 17 ♜fg5?!

Once consulted, several engines want to play this move, but why allow Black to swap off his bad bishop? Once again, 17 ♜fd2 was indicated.

17...♝xg5 18 ♜xg5 ♜f6 19 ♜e6?

This invasion was presumably Tan's point, but he should have retreated to e4, which would still have retained an edge.

19...♝df8! 20 ♜xc7

It turns out that Black has more than enough resources to deal with the pesky knight. One might criticise Tan's next, but even after 20 ♜xf8 ♜xf8 Black is in control, being ready to invade on f3 and meet 21 f3 with 21...e4!.

20...♝c8 21 ♜e6 ♜xe6 22 dxe6 ♜xe6 23 b3 e4!

Black's early play may have been risky, but it did allow White to suffer a rush of blood to the head and self destruct. Now the initiative belongs to Hawkins and he must have been enjoying himself, being able to bring a knight to e5, if needed, while going after the white king.

24 ♜d4?

White's position was most unpleasant, but he had to try something like 24 ♜c1, keeping his queen in touch with h5.

24...♝h5 25 ♜h1 ♜h3+ 26 ♜g1 ♜e8!

Black can even afford to give up his d-pawn. Hawkins has realised that he has more than enough attacking power in the key sector of the board.

27 ♜xd6 ♜h8

Fine prophylaxis which prepares ...♝e5 without dropping the e-pawn to a check on d5.

28 ♜d4 ♜g5

Calm, and deadly.

29 ♜xg7+

Desperation, but 29...♝h4 was a winning threat. White has been outplayed.

29...♝xg7 30 ♜d4+ ♜h6 31 ♜d1 ♜h4

In the fifth round it was back to keeping control as White as Hawkins outmanoeuvred the young Singaporean IM and north-west resident Daniel Fernandez. Three impressive victories over dangerous opposition, but despite being on 5/5 Hawkins was yet to play a grandmaster (it really is high time the ECF stopped running the British Championship as a money-making exercise), a situation which came to an end when he was paired with Simon Williams. Trailing by half a point, the Ginger GM refused to allow peace to break out in what had been quite a balanced manoeuvring struggle, but his typical desire to play for more turned out to be somewhat flawed.

S.Williams-J.Hawkins

Round 6

A draw would have been likely after 37

Commentators Vaidyanathan Ravikumar and Andrew Martin entertained the crowds at the venue and several thousand more online.

$\mathbb{E}c2 \mathbb{A}b5$ 38 $\mathbb{E}ff2$ since it's not easy for either side to make progress. Williams, however, must have tired of all the back-and-forth manoeuvring and was determined to do what he does best – attack.

37 $\mathbb{E}c1?$ $\mathbb{W}xf4$ 38 $d6$

The point of White's play, although it transpires that both captures are more than fine for Black.

38... $cxd6$ 39 $\mathbb{E}c7?$

39 $\mathbb{E}d1$ would still have offered a few chances to hold, but Williams continues down the planned path...

39... $\mathbb{E}eg7$ 40 $\mathbb{W}a7$ $\mathbb{W}e5!$

...only to find that Hawkins has seen further. White has jettisoned two pawns and it turns out that bishop is taboo.

41 $\mathbb{E}xd7$ $\mathbb{W}a1+$ 0-1

It is Black's attack which decides, in view of 42 $\mathbb{W}h2$ $\mathbb{E}xh3+!$ followed by mate on g1 or h1.

Not even in the days of Julian Hodgson did we see someone reach 6/6, although Jonathan Mestel did achieve that fine start en route to victory at Portsmouth in 1976. Before Aberystwyth one might have thought that only David Howell could pull off such a feat, since on paper the gap between a player of his top-100 strength and the rest of the field appeared rather large. However, Howell had just completed his degree at Cardiff University and was initially a little rusty. He had to defend a pawn down to draw when his favourite Grünfeld Defence went wrong against Richard Pert in round 3 before, in a bid to catch up, he pushed the boat too far against Simon Williams, himself no stranger to complex and highly unusual positions.

D.Howell-S.Williams

Round 4

In this rather crazy position the players have been repeating (24 $\mathbb{E}f2$ $\mathbb{Q}h1$ 25 $\mathbb{E}f1$ $\mathbb{Q}g3$ 26 $\mathbb{E}f2$ $\mathbb{Q}g3$), but now Howell showed that he is nothing if not brave.

27 $\mathbb{E}h2?$ $\mathbb{A}d6$ 28 $f4$ $\mathbb{E}xf4$ 29 $\mathbb{E}h5$ $\mathbb{A}f3+$ 30 $\mathbb{W}e1$ $\mathbb{Q}g3+$ 31 $\mathbb{W}f1$ $\mathbb{Q}g6$ 32 $\mathbb{Q}c3$

Finally developing his queenside, but allowing Black to bring his final piece into the attack. The silicon monster maintains that 32 $\mathbb{E}h3!?$ is good for White, but few humans would feel comfortable here and even less comfortable with Simon Williams sitting opposite. Perhaps, though, 32... $\mathbb{E}f8$ (or 32... $\mathbb{Q}g5$ 33 $\mathbb{Q}g1$ $\mathbb{Q}xg4$ 34 $\mathbb{E}xh1$ $\mathbb{Q}xh1$ 35 $\mathbb{Q}xh1$ $\mathbb{E}f8$ 36 $\mathbb{Q}c3$) 33 $\mathbb{Q}g1$ $\mathbb{Q}f2+$ 34 $\mathbb{Q}h2$ $\mathbb{Q}xg4$ 35 $\mathbb{Q}d3$ is more than tenable, largely due to the strangely-placed knight on h1.

32... $\mathbb{E}f8$ 33 $\mathbb{Q}g1$ $\mathbb{Q}f2+$ 34 $\mathbb{Q}h2$ $\mathbb{Q}xg4$

Now 35 $\mathbb{E}h3$ $\mathbb{Q}xh3$ 36 $\mathbb{Q}xh3$ $\mathbb{Q}g3$ 37 $\mathbb{Q}g2$, and if 37... $\mathbb{Q}h5$ 38 $\mathbb{E}f1$ would still be very sharp and by no means bad for White, but with move 40 looming Howell miscalculated.

35 $\mathbb{E}xh7?$ $\mathbb{Q}xh7$ 36 $\mathbb{E}xh1$ $\mathbb{Q}f3$ 37 $\mathbb{E}f1$ $\mathbb{Q}c6$ 38 $\mathbb{Q}d1$

The point of White's combination, but after...

38... $\mathbb{Q}g3+!$ 39 $\mathbb{Q}xg3$ $\mathbb{E}xf1$

...an exchange had fallen. Howell resisted desperately, but eventually had to throw in the towel after 83 moves.

Jonathan Hawkins was able to hold his nerve against Richard Pert in the final round and so secure at least a share of first place.

It would, however, be wrong to criticise Howell's decision to play on. It wasn't an objective mistake and such a desire to fight, even quite often with a hanging flag, has won the 2013 British Champion many, many games over the years. More champion-like qualities were evident as Howell ruthlessly dispatched Martin Brown, Jack Rudd and Chris Ward to reach the rest day on 5½/7, a point behind Hawkins, whose winning run came to an end when he couldn't break down Yang-Fan Zhou.

Incidentally, it should be pointed out that while the British Championship is normally played over eleven days Monday-Friday, with a rest day on the middle Sunday, this year's event kicked off on a Saturday. Then a week later came the rest day before the event concluded on a Wednesday, giving any Olympiad players present, of whom David Howell was the only one, the chance to turn up on time for England duty in Tromsø.

Commentators Andrew Martin and Vaidyanathan Ravikumar unsurprisingly found a large audience, both in Aberystwyth and online, ready for the round 8 clash between the defending champion and the tournament leader. However, as is often the case, a classic game failed to materialise. Howell was outprepared in a Ragozin Defence, failed to obtain full compensation with a Catalan-like pawn sacrifice and eventually, still a pawn down, had to offer a draw. Perhaps Hawkins should have played on, but both sides had passed pawns and he was a point clear...

Nick Pert tried his hardest with the Dutch to unsettle Hawkins in the ninth round, but the leader held tight, just as his Lasker Defence did in the tenth against Mark Hebden.

A further draw followed against Richard Pert, which meant that Hawkins finished on an unbeaten 8½/11 while completing his GM title, but was that going to be enough for sole first with Howell still in pursuit?

The ninth round also saw a determined Howell eventually overcome Daniel Fernandez, albeit not without a little fortune, but he was unable to fully close the gap to Hawkins in his penultimate game, as Nick Pert's defences remained typically tight. That left the defending champion reliant on Hawkins not winning his final game, while he himself had to defeat Mark Hebden, who was by no means out of the running himself, also being on '5+' after a typically gutsy display.

It's safe to say that the Leicester-based Grandmaster had been outplayed without ever managing to create any real counterplay. The manner in which Howell concluded proceedings was, however, still impressive.

40 $\mathbb{Q}c1$!

The bishop returns home to cover b2 and so allow White to pick off e4.

40... $\mathbb{Q}g8$ 41 $\mathbb{Q}xe4$ $\mathbb{Q}xe4$ 42 $\mathbb{Q}xe4$ $\mathbb{Q}xe4$
43 $\mathbb{Q}xe4$ a4 44 $\mathbb{Q}f1$ $\mathbb{Q}f7$ 45 $\mathbb{Q}e2$ a3

This was Black's only real try, but now White will enjoy an outside passed pawn.

46 $bxa3$ $\mathbb{Q}xc3$ 47 $\mathbb{Q}d3$ $\mathbb{Q}f6$ 48 a4 c5
49 $\mathbb{Q}e3$

The a-pawn can't advance for now, but this ties Black down to the defence of c5 after which White can switch his attention to a second front on the kingside.

49... $\mathbb{Q}e7$ 50 g4 $\mathbb{Q}d6$ 51 $\mathbb{Q}d2$ $\mathbb{Q}c7$ 52
 $\mathbb{Q}e3$ $\mathbb{Q}d6$ 53 h4! $\mathbb{Q}f8$ 54 h5 $\mathbb{Q}d6$ 55
 $\mathbb{Q}d2$ $\mathbb{Q}c7$ 56 $\mathbb{Q}e3$

Howell continues to repeat, gaining time on the clock and emphasising just who is in control.

56... $\mathbb{Q}d6$ 57 f4 $\mathbb{Q}f6$ 58 $\mathbb{Q}d2$ $\mathbb{Q}c7$ 59
 $\mathbb{Q}c3+$!

Howell had exploited an early pull (stemming from 1 e4 e5 2 $\mathbb{Q}f3$ $\mathbb{Q}c6$ 3 $\mathbb{Q}c4$ $\mathbb{Q}e7$ 4 d4 d6 5 dx5 dx5 6 $\mathbb{Q}bd2$) to saddle Hebden with a number of weak pawns.

In the final round Mark Hebden and David Howell both had to win if they were to have any chance of catching Hawkins.

Finally the bishop finds a better diagonal.

59... $\mathbb{Q}f7$ 60 $g5$ 1-0

The finish might have been 60... $\mathbb{Q}f8$ 61 $g6$ $\mathbb{Q}d8$ 62 $f5$ $\mathbb{Q}a6$ 63 $\mathbb{Q}c4$ $\mathbb{Q}e7$ 64 $a5$ when $\mathbb{Q}c2-b3-a4-b5$ is one winning plan.

Elsewhere there were plenty of impressive performances in Aberystwyth. 14-year-old Ravia Haria of Haberdashers' Aske's School did well to recover from 1/3, concluding an amazing comeback by defeating Simon Williams in the final round to finish in a tie for third. Elsewhere Daniel Fernandez only lost to the two winners whilst making a 2500+ performance, although that was arguably overshadowed by his younger brother Michael. Belying a 2029 rating, Fernandez junior make an incredible 6½/11 for a 2336 performance. Meanwhile Amy Hoare gained rating points whilst finishing on 4½, which was enough to take the British and English ladies' titles as top talent and defending champion Akshaya Kalaiyalahan collapsed to just 3½.

Older and not so old readers may have enjoyed seeing Mark Hebden, Chris Ward and John Emms up on the top boards throughout and I'm delighted that the last of those has kindly annotated an important early clash for us.

J.Emms-C.Ward
Round 4
Catalan Opening
(Notes by John Emms)

It's never easy playing someone who's both a long-time friend and training partner. At least when Chris and I do play, it usually means we're both doing well in a tournament. In this case Chris was joint leader with 3/3, having just defeated Mark Hebden in what was later awarded game of the tournament, and I was half a point behind.

British Ladies' Champion Amy Hoare.

I've recently realised (better late than never!) that there's more to life than 1 e4.

1... $e6$ 2 $g3$ $d5$ 3 $\mathbb{Q}g2$ $\mathbb{Q}f6$ 4 $\mathbb{Q}f3$ $\mathbb{Q}e7$ 5 $d4$ 0-0 6 $\mathbb{Q}c2$ $c6$

This move surprised me a little. The Closed Catalan is hardly a rare choice; it's just that I was expecting either 6...dxc4 or 6...c5.

7 0-0 b5

And now I really was on my own, even though I'd seen the idea of ...b5 in similar positions. Black normally starts developing the queenside with ... $\mathbb{Q}bd7$, ...b6 and ... $\mathbb{Q}b7$ or ... $\mathbb{Q}a6$.

8 c5

Keeping the tension with 8 b3 must also be possible here, but blocking the queenside and then going for the e2-e4 pawn break seemed like a more straightforward option.

8...a5

Another move I wasn't expecting, at least not straightaway. In fact ...a5 is simply a part of Black's expansion plan on the queenside. As Chris mentioned after the game, if Black delays this move, White might play a2-a4 and meet ...b5 with a4-a5, isolating Black's pawn on b4.

9 $\mathbb{Q}g5$

White can play 9 $\mathbb{Q}bd2$ $\mathbb{Q}bd7$ 10 e4, but I assumed that Black doesn't want to take the pawn when it reaches e4 and I didn't want to block in my dark-squared bishop. There's also 9 $\mathbb{Q}f4$ $\mathbb{Q}bd2$ 10 $\mathbb{Q}bd2$ and here 10... $\mathbb{Q}h5$ 11 $\mathbb{Q}d6$ looks nice for White and much more appetising now than it looked during the game.

9... $\mathbb{Q}bd7$ 10 $\mathbb{Q}bd2$ $h6$ 11 $\mathbb{Q}xf6$

11 $\mathbb{Q}f4$ is still possible even here, but I was happy to continue with the intended plan: take on f6, e2-e4, $\mathbb{Q}fe1$, $\mathbb{Q}(d2)-f1-e3$, and then have another think.

11... $\mathbb{Q}xf6$ 12 e4 b4 13 $\mathbb{Q}fe1$ a4

It's not an easy choice between this move and 13... $\mathbb{Q}a6$. Black will certainly gain some possibilities based on either ...b3 or ...a3. On the other hand, there's no going back and the b4-pawn turns out to be a weakness later on.

14 $\mathbb{Q}f1$ $\mathbb{Q}a6$ 15 exd5

Ideally I would have preferred to keep the tension in the centre a little longer, but I was concerned by the possibility of 15 $\mathbb{Q}e3$ b3, deflecting the queen from her defence of the e4-pawn.

15... $\mathbb{Q}xf1$

15...cx d5 (or 15...exd5) 16 $\mathbb{Q}e3$ $\mathbb{Q}b5$ 17 $\mathbb{Q}g4$ was the type of position I had been aiming for. It feels like White's kingside play comes naturally here. The bishop on b5 looks quite impressive, but actually doesn't do a great deal and is probably not as good as the g4-knight, which is why Chris decided to swap it off while he had the chance.

16 $\mathbb{Q}xf1$ cxd5

Against 16...exd5 I was planning 17 $\mathbb{Q}h3$ $\mathbb{Q}e8$ 18 $\mathbb{Q}d2$ and White keeps some advantage.

This is a critical moment. If Black could grab one extra move here it would be ... $\mathbb{Q}a5$. This is followed by the key manoeuvre ... $\mathbb{Q}b8-c6$ and Black's position would make complete sense. So my next move was vital:

17 $\mathbb{Q}b5$

White now has a straightforward plan to gain a big advantage:

- i. Keep the queenside blocked;
- ii. Swap off on d7;
- iii. Plonk a knight on e5; and
- iv. Aim for the f4-f5 pawn break.

Chris chose to avoid the exchange and hoped to get rid of the bishop later on, in some cases even at the cost of a rook.

17...a3 18 b3 $\mathbb{Q}b8$ 19 $\mathbb{Q}e5$ $\mathbb{Q}a5$

After the game we agreed that 19... $\mathbb{Q}a5$ is a much stronger option for Black and would justify the decision to play 18... $\mathbb{Q}b8$. The point is that in some positions Black can sacrifice the exchange to get his knight to the vital c6-square. For example, 20 $\mathbb{Q}d3$ (if 20 $\mathbb{Q}a4$ Black can play 20... $\mathbb{Q}xe5$ 21 $\mathbb{Q}xe5$ $\mathbb{Q}xa4$ 22 $\mathbb{Q}xa4$ $\mathbb{Q}c6$) 20... $\mathbb{Q}xe5$ 21 $\mathbb{Q}xe5$ $\mathbb{Q}c7$ 22 $\mathbb{Q}ae1$ $\mathbb{Q}xb5$ 23 $\mathbb{Q}xb5$ $\mathbb{Q}c6$, attacking e5 and d4. Even here White keeps some advantage, but Black is much better placed than in the game.

20 $\mathbb{Q}d3$

The bishop is secure on b5 and Black's queen gets in the way of the rook. Now Chris could find nothing better than swapping off all the minor pieces and I gained an even better version of what I was originally aiming for. 20 $\mathbb{Q}a4$ $\mathbb{Q}c7$ was Chris's idea, when the idea of ... $\mathbb{Q}xe5$, ... $\mathbb{Q}xa4$ and ... $\mathbb{Q}c6$ comes into play.

20... $\mathbb{Q}xe5$ 21 $\mathbb{Q}xe5$ $\mathbb{Q}c7$ 22 $\mathbb{Q}ae1$ $\mathbb{Q}c6$ 23 $\mathbb{Q}xc6$ $\mathbb{Q}xc6$ 24 f4 $\mathbb{Q}a6$

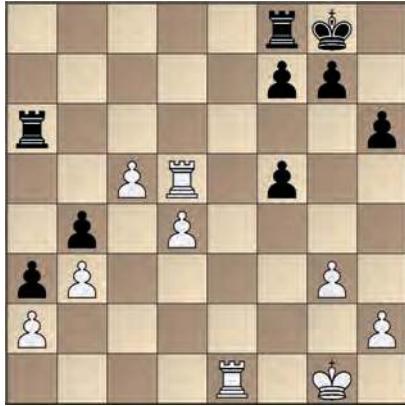

24...g6 runs into 25 $\mathbb{Q}xe6$, but 24... $\mathbb{Q}ae8$ is more resilient.

25 $\mathbb{Q}xa6$ $\mathbb{Q}xa6$ 26 f5 exf5

If 26... $\mathbb{Q}e8$ 27 $\mathbb{Q}xd5$ wins a pawn.

27 $\mathbb{Q}xd5$

With two connected passed pawns in the centre, I was absolutely positive this double-rook ending was winning for White. However, Chris, despite having virtually no time on his clock, found some 'only moves' to keep the game going and it almost paid dividends...

27...e6 28 f2 fe8 29 xe6 fxe6
30 d7 c8 31 e7 c6 32 e3

The exchange on e6 means it's down to just one passed pawn, but even so this is still completely winning for White.

32...g5

The only chance. Black's king is cut off on the back rank, but he needs to get going on the kingside at any cost.

33 b7

I was also considering 33 d3 f8 34 bb7, which is also good, as ...f4 no longer comes with check. For example, 34...e5 35 xb4 exd4 36 xd4 f4 37 gxf4 gxf4 38 bb6 and White wins.

33...e5

Again, the only move.

34 e7

Up to this point I'd handled the endgame pretty well, but this move – played quickly after rejecting better options, which is never a good idea – is a really bad choice. In trying to keep control of everything, I nearly end up losing all control.

My original intention had been 34 bb6 cc8 35 xh6, which is fine, but I suddenly thought why should I allow the black king off the back rank? However, 34 xb4 f4+ 35 gxf4 gxf4+ 36 e4 exd4 and now the star move 37 cc4, as pointed out by Andy Martin in the commentary room, is the cleanest win.

34...f4+ 35 gxf4 gxf4+ 36 e4

Luckily for me it just wasn't Chris's day – he overlooks a final tactic and loses a vital pawn. After 36...exd4 37 xd4 (I'd even been considering 37 d5, but 37...f3 38 e1 f6 39 c6 d3 40 c7 f8 is a ridiculous position for White to get into considering where we started) 37...f3 38 e1 f2 39 f1 f6 40 c4 f7 41 xb4 e6 the game is very much alive and Black definitely has drawing chances here.

White can safely take the pawn. After 37...f3 38 xf6 f2 Black promotes, but Chris had missed that White has 39 g6 f1 40 e8+ when Black has to give back the queen.

37...f8 38 d5 f3 39 e1 1-0

The two connected pawns beat the lone passed pawn. After 39...f7 the simplest is 40 f1 e7 41 e4 picking up the f-pawn.

Leading Scores:

1-2 Jonathan Hawkins (London), David Howell (Seaford) 8½/11

3-8 Keith Arkell (Paignton), John Emms (Hildenborough), Ravia Haria (Barnet), Mark Hebden (Leicester), Nicholas Pert (Fleet), Richard Pert (London) 7½.

To Aberystwyth!

Andrew Zigmond made his now annual pilgrimage to the British Championships

As a club player of little ability it didn't occur to me to visit the British Championships until a couple of years ago. I knew that there was a bit more to it than the actual championship, but I still didn't think there was anything for me there except the chance to watch some of the country's finest at work – which didn't quite justify the train fare.

It was a day trip to North Shields 2012 that suggested I might have been missing out on a treat and my first British – Torquay 2013 – confirmed it. Aberystwyth 2014 couldn't come soon enough after that.

If you're a club/congress player and you haven't checked out what's available at the British then you might be surprised. There are morning and afternoon weekday tournaments for players of all standards, as well as an increased number of senior tournaments. There is also a rapidplay on the rest day of the championship itself (you'd be surprised how many players can't manage a day without any chess), and a weekend tournament following the traditional Friday evening/Saturday/Sunday format. It was this latter tournament that I opted for.

It's always good to have a change of scenery, even if you intend to spend most of the time hunched over a chessboard, and the British is designed with the chess tourist in mind. The Welsh coast was as scenic as the brochures made it look and I managed to find myself a hotel right on the sea front, which meant five nights sleeping with the waves constantly in the background.

Which takes me on to the championship itself. No two British Championships are quite the same as the exact logistics are dictated by the playing area. In Torquay the principal events took place in a large central hall with the weekender played on a balcony upstairs and the junior events hosted in rooms elsewhere. Aberystwyth 2014 was held on the University campus (halfway up a fairly relentless slope – so good exercise), with the event split across several buildings as a result.

Many players were staying on campus and with the event a little apart from the town centre, there was almost a chess village atmosphere. Your first sight of the main playing hall was of players analysing and playing blitz games while enjoying a drink and a bite to eat. I even recognised the current junior director working with a young player.

Space in the main hall was limited and as a result lacked the theatre of Torquay and North Shields, where the top boards were cordoned off and chairs provided so the games could be followed on the display boards. Instead spectators were able to gather around the top boards in true weekend congress fashion which might have been a little off putting for the players. Obviously the championship itself had precedence in the playing hall with the other events being forced to the margins and even to another building if lack of space dictated. You'll see the relevance of this shortly.

I arrived on the Wednesday which allowed one day for sightseeing/relaxing before getting a piece of the action. As usual I didn't bother with sunscreen and after one and half days of exploring the town and beaches in glorious sunshine, I turned up for the weekender with sunburn and the will to win.

I'll mention here that I had brought a chess set and several books with me. Indeed, my evenings had been spent trying to get my head around the Accelerated Dragon and the Grünfeld which I was convinced would come up in my black games.

The first round of the weekender began at six thirty, held at the far end of the playing hall with the championship itself already in progress. This meant that players had to take their seats in silence with none of the hustle and buzz that normally characterises weekend events. Obviously the silence applied to the arbiters too; the start of the round had to be signalled rather than announced. But the order was still the same: 'Start the white clock on all boards'. I was playing white and thus I advanced my king pawn two squares praying, as I always do, that I wasn't about to make a fool of myself.

Earlier I'd discovered that I was just in the bottom half of the draw, which meant the swiss pairings put me against the second highest-rated player in the section. Two hours later I was reasonably happy with the outcome; having got a terrific attack early on followed by a heart-stopping moment when I thought everything was going to go wrong, the game settled into a drawn position.

Knowing I was at least spared the ignominy of a zero from five-round tournament I took a wander around the hall to see what was going on. Most of the games were finished, but Richard Pert and Charlie Storey were still playing and (I think) they had just reached this position.

Play continued 62 d7! ♕a5+ 63 ♔e6 ♕xc2 64 d8♕. One can now say, in an academic kind of way, that White should win, but how many players of my standard would want to have to play this position? As Pert sank into a deep think I was tempted to return to the hotel for a beer and an earlyish night, but decided that it wasn't very often I got to watch players of this calibre at work – I decided to stay and see how they did it (which Pert did with 64... ♕a4 65 e5 ♕b3 66 ♕d3 ♕b4 67 ♕d5 ♕b2 68 ♕c5 ♕b8 69 ♕d4 ♕c8+ 70 ♕b6 ♕b8+ 71 ♕c7 ♕b3 72 e6 ♕a2 73 ♕c4 ♕b2 74 ♕d4 ♕a2 75 ♕c4 ♕b2 76 e7 c2 77 e8 ♕c1 78 ♕e5+ ♕c3 79 ♕b8 ♕c2 80 ♕b4+ ♕b3 81 ♕exc3+ 1-0).

The next morning the weekender had the playing hall to themselves, which meant that we got to play on the touch sensitive boards that the top players use. At the very least this meant a pleasant change from plastic pieces and roll up boards, and during the game I wondered if the games were being broadcast live. I've since discovered that they weren't; possibly a good thing as my second game saw my hopes of victory (yes, I had some) dashed. Playing a slightly lower-graded player I made a few positional missteps on the black side of the English (an opening I struggle against), and was ground down. You win some...

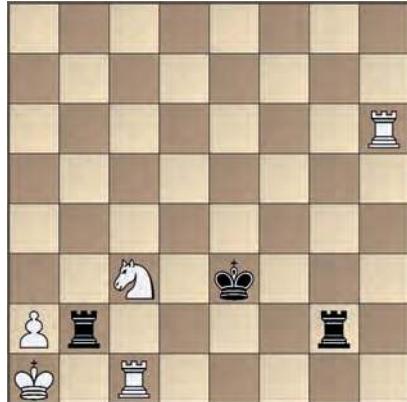

For round three, the seniors tournament pushed the weekender back to the other end of the hall and playing white again, I was determined to come back fighting and duly did.

A.Zigmond-T.Crouch
Aberystwyth 2014

I felt quite smug about 13 ♜e6?! at the time, but closer inspection proves just how amateurish it was. The bishop looks as if it cannot be taken because after the knight recaptures the queen and g7-bishop are forked. However, the move may set up a threat but it doesn't force anything and as I waited for my opponent's reply it occurred to me that he can just move the rook. However, Fritz notes that after 13...fxe6 14 ♜xe6, 14...♜c4 solves all of Black's problems (in the event he played 13...♝c4 and after 14 ♛e2 and an exchange on e3 the bishop threat stayed on for a few more moves).

After what felt like a hard fought tactical battle (when I showed Fritz later he shouted some quite nasty abuse at both sides), we reached the following position.

I banged down 42 ♜d1+ thinking that it was winning, which it is, but after 42...♛d2 I made my worst move of the event. Thinking that it was a simple exchange of rooks, I played 43 ♜xb2?? ♛xc1 and (fortunately) I eventually won seven moves later. It simply did not occur to me that I could have captured with the king instead.

I've never, ever finished a congress on less than one and a half points and my third round win meant that I'd achieved this with two rounds to spare. Unfortunately that was as good as it got. My fourth round game saw me try a tactical idea that looked good, but didn't quite work. With the championship proper starting again after the rest day, the Soanes and Yates weekenders were relegated to the Student Union which in itself felt like a comedown after the excellent playing conditions in the main hall. In the final round I thought I was getting on top, but I underestimated my opponent's attacking chances and got shot down while trying to defend my kingside.

So thus ended my Aberystwyth adventure, but the long return train journey to Harrogate gave me plenty of opportunity to reflect on the experience. Some people have criticised the current format without ever giving a coherent idea of what should replace it. It is true that an all-play-all of the top players would be a more attractive model for sponsors and it is a shame that sponsorship can't be found to entice the country's elite to the British. However, it is vital to retain all the side events, including the weekender, that make the British something of a chess carnival.

I'm sure a few people will have criticisms (it's true that silence could have been more strictly enforced outside the playing hall). However, I have to end by noting that the team (and as an ECF official myself I do have to declare my interest) were putting in 12-hour unpaid days to deliver the event, which they are hardly obliged to do. That's something too many players – including myself on occasion – take for granted.

And the Grünfeld and the Accelerated Dragon – neither came up. So much for preparation. On that note, let the countdown to Warwick 2015 begin!

Reports from the 2014 Olympiad in Tromso - David Openshaw

The Olympiad starts today in Tromso, the major town in Northern Norway with a population of around 60,000. It is less than 2,000 km from the North Pole and it's still light here for 24 hours. As you would expect, the Olympiad is big news here and throughout Norway [see photos]. The Norwegian Government have spent around £9m to hold this event. The Opening Ceremony was shown live on TV. 174 Teams are competing in the Opens section and 137 teams in the Women's section. It's the fourth largest sporting event in the world [measured by the number of participating countries]. Round One starts today, and our Opens team play Wales, with our Women's team playing Malta.

Rounds 1 and 2

The event is an eleven round Swiss with each round over 4 boards. Most teams have five players of whom any four can play in a particular round. The pairings by team are available by 10 pm on the day before the match and the individual pairings are made known by 10 am on the day of the match. The event is based on Match Points. So if you win the 4 board match we get 2 points and if its a 2-2 draw then both sides get 1 point.

Both our teams had good wins in the first round in Round 1 our Opens team beat Wales 4-0. On board 1 Jones beat Jones or more precisely Gawain beat Richard. Nigel Short, David Howell and Matthew Sadler all won.

Our Women's team beat Malta 4-0 with wins for Sue Maroroa, Sabrina Chevannes, Akshaya Kalaiyalahan and Ann-Marie James.

In Round 2 our Opens team played Singapore one of the few teams with a woman in their team. Gawain Jones and Nigel Short drew on the top two boards, David Howell beat the Women's International Master Qiyan Gong on board three and Matthew Sadler won on board 4.

Our Women's team played Bosnia and Herzegovina. We made a good start to the match and, after two hours play, looked to have a slight edge. After that however things did not go our way, and only Jovanka Houska on Board 1 scored for us with a draw giving a final score of 0.5-3.5 to Bosnia.

Today in the third round we play Germany in the Opens and our Women's team face the Dominican Republic

Rounds 3 and 4

In the Open section three countries are on 100% after 4 rounds Azerbaijan, Serbia and Bulgaria. In round 3 we drew 2-2 against Germany and in round 4 we beat Latvia 3-1 so we are in a group of 14 countries including Russia, China, Ukraine and the Netherlands with 3 wins and a draw (7 match points).

Our match against a similar rated German side was closely fought. It seemed appropriate that both Michael Adams and David Howell used the Berlin Defence as black to thwart their opponents and drew their games. Matthew Sadler won with a strongly played game eventually winning by trapping his opponent's Knight in the endgame. Gawain Jones gradually found his isolated queen's pawn caused too many problems and lost in a rook and pawn endgame.

In Round 4 against Latvia, Michael Adams had a very good win against Shirov. David Howell and Matthew Sadler both won well. Nigel Short got into difficulties early on but fought hard and near the end had a chance for perpetual check but eventually lost. Final score 3-1 to England.

Today we are drawn to play Vietnam in Round 5.

In the Women's section five teams have a 100% record after Round 4. The top two seeds China and Russia, Hungary, Iran and Indonesia. In Round 3 we beat the Dominican Republic 3.5 to 0.5 with wins for Jovanka Houska, Sue Maroroa and Sabrina Chevannes and a draw for Ann-Marie James.

In Round 4 we had a difficult day and went down 0.5-3.5 against Belarus. So after 4 rounds we have two wins and two losses (4 match points). Today we play Algeria.

Rounds 5 - 7

After 7 rounds Azerbaijan lead the Open Section with 13 match points (6 wins and one draw) and Russia lead the Women's section with a perfect 14 match points (7 wins).

In the Open Section we have 10 match points after a draw with Vietnam 2-2, a loss to Armenia 1.5 -2.5 and a win against Canada 3-1. The teams just behind the leaders Azerbaijan are Czech Republic(who beat Russia 3-1) in round 7, Bulgaria and Romania. Russia are on the same points as us.

Against Vietnam in Round 5 Michael Adams won after being slightly worse when he saw a tactical threat which his opponent did not deal with. David Howell and Matthew Sadler drew. But Gawain Jones lost after being was slightly better early on.

Result England 2 Vietnam 2.

In round 6 we played the very strong Armenian side and current holders. Michael Adams drew with Aronian, and Matthew Sadler drew. But Nigel Short had a poor position early on. On board two Gawain Jones went in for complications to try to create the winning chances we needed to draw the match. He had an advantage of Queen against Rook and Knight but with few pawns it was not easy to find any kind of winning plan and the rook and knight together covered the key squares. The game reached completely drawn position despite the computer evaluation of +2!

Result England 1.5 Armenia 2.5.

In round 7 we played Canada and won 3-1. Adams drew and Jones won with the other two games continuing with uncertain outcomes. Howell was definitely worse at one stage, Sadler drew and Howell fought back to win. You can see the analysis of the final few moves on

<http://en.chessbase.com/post/tromso-07-russia-wins-russia-falls>

Final score England 3 Canada 1

In the Women's section Russia lead after beating China in round 7 when both had 100% records. World Champion Hou Yifan(China) lost and Russia won the match 3-1. Incidentally it was a bad round for both World Champions as Magnus Carlsen also lost (to Naiditsch of Germany). So Russia lead with 14 points followed by China and Hungary 12 points.

Our results have been mixed with a draw against Algeria, a win against Peru 3-1 and a loss against Australia 1.5-2.5.

Sabrina Chevannes and Ann-Marie James won against Peru and Sue Maroroa had a good quick win against Australia.

This leaves us in mid table with 3 wins 3 losses and a draw.

Round 8

In the Open section China beat Azerbaijan 3-1 to take sole lead with 14 match points. France, Ukraine, Azerbaijan, Czech Republic and Romania are all one point behind on 13 match points. We missed a good opportunity to join teams on 12 match points when we lost to Serbia 1-3. Russia, the pre-tournament favourites, are on 11 points after a 2-2 with Spain in which Kramnik lost.

David Howell and Matthew Sadler both lost, and we were left to fight for a draw. Michael Adams won his game but despite pushing for the equalising point Gawain Jones also lost. We therefore remain on 10 match points.

In the women's section Russia continued their unbeaten record with a 3.5-0.5 win against Hungary. China also won but the two point difference at the top remains with Russia on 16 points.

We had a good win against Jordan 2.5-1.5 with wins from Jovanka Houska and Akshaya Kalaiyalahan. Sue Maroroa drew on board 2 and Sabrina Chevannes lost. We now have 9 match points.

Rounds 9 & 10

In the Open Section, with one round to go, China leads by one point with Hungary in second place. In third place, two points behind, are eight teams, including Russia, USA, France and Ukraine. We are on 14 points, three behind China.

In rounds 9 and 10 we scored two good wins 3-1 against Denmark and 3-1 against Sweden. David Howell had wins in both matches. In the final round we play Cuba.

In the Women's section Russia failed to win for the first time going down to Ukraine. They still lead with 18 points, one ahead of China and Ukraine. We have 11 points. In rounds 9 and 10 we had two draws against Sweden and Brazil, with Ann-Marie James winning in both matches. In the final round we play Wales.

Final Round

The final round of the Olympiad was overshadowed by the deaths on the final day of two players. I'm sure all chess players around the world will join in sending condolences to the families and friends of Kurt Meier (Seychelles) and Alisher Anarkulov (Uzbekistan).

Kurt Meier collapsed at the board late on in the round after most games had finished and died later. Alisher Anarkulov was found in the evening in his hotel room. Both were said by the organisers to have died from natural causes.

In the Open Section China continued to dominate beating Poland 3-1 to take the gold medal. They won 8 and drew 3 of their 11 matches to give them a final result of 19 match points. Of the 44 individual matches they played they lost only one - a remarkable record. 20 year old GM Yu Yangyi on board 3 had great performance with 9.5 out of 11 and a performance of 2912.

Hungary drew with second seeds Ukraine and that proved enough for them to take the silver medal on tie break with 17 match points. Judit Polgar who announced her retirement from professional chess scored 4.5 out of 6.

India (without Anand) were the surprise winners of the bronze medal. They beat Uzbekistan 3.5-0.5 in the final round.

Our win in round 10 against Sweden had put us in a good position for a high placing if we could beat Cuba in the last round. It proved a very close match which we narrowly lost 1.5 -2.5. We thus finished on 14 match points.

On an individual basis many congratulations to Michael Adams who won a silver medal in the Best Board 1 performance with a rating of 2839. Topalov(Bulgaria) won the gold and Anish Giri (Netherlands) won the bronze, all ahead of Carlsen, Aronian and Kramnik. Also many congratulations to David Howell for his 2709 performance.

In the Women's section Russia dominated the event and a last round win against Bulgaria gave them 20 match points. They clearly benefitted from the late transfer of federation of board 1 Kateryna Lagno previously of the Ukraine Federation for fees of 25,000Euros.

China and Ukraine both had 18 match points with China winning the silver medal on tie break.

We finished strongly winning 3-1 against Wales with wins for Jovanka Houska and Sabrina Chevannes and draws for Akshaya Kalaiyalahan and Ann-Marie James. This gave us 13 match points with 5 wins 3 draws and 3 losses.

JUNIOR CHESS

Sharon Daniel - congratulations

Congratulations to eleven-year-old Sharon Daniel of Bolton Girls' School who won the 2014 Child Genius show broadcast on Channel 4. Sharon was the British Under 11 Girls Chess Champion in 2013 and represented England at the 2013 World Youth in the United Arab Emirates. She is also part of the Manchester A team in the Junior Four Nations Chess League.

Congratulations - Louise Head

Louise-in-Greece Congratulations to Louise Head who took the silver medal, finishing as the second highest woman in the 2014 European Amateur in Eretria, Greece. She also won a cash prize and has been invited to the World Amateur Championships 2015 with free board and accommodation.

Glorney International - the final day

- from Chris Howell

Incongruous as it seems to write of English triumphs over the Scots (not to mention the Welsh and Irish) in the shadow of the magnificent William Wallace Memorial close to Bannockburn, this was another excellent day for the English chess teams in Stirling. England retained the Glorney Cup with a round to spare with a 4.5-0.5 morning win over the Irish, and the England Girls built a clear lead in the Gilbert Cup with an excellent 3-0 win. The Robertson team were a little more restrained with a 3.5-2.5 win over the Irish, but maybe performance of the day was from the under-pressure Stokes team who reversed their opening morning 4.5-1.5 loss to the Irish U12s with 3 great wins on the top 3 boards including an extraordinary winning positional whole-rook sacrifice from board 2 James Moreby against his 1884-rated opponent who had 4/4 to that point. A very determined performance from the bottom 3 boards too, with 3 solid draws against their strong Irish opposite numbers who had been on fire up to that point! Alex Golding has been imperious on top board for the Stokes team and took his score to 5/5, as did William Claridge-Hansen on board 2 in the Glorney.

So England went into the 4 afternoon matches against the Welsh as strong favourites to win all 3 remaining trophies, and duly swept to victory in all three, although the Welsh girls put up particularly stiff resistance in the Gilbert. Alex and William completed their 6/6 scores, but every member of each team made a significant contribution to the overall English success. A sincere thank you to Debbie Taylor who was a fantastic Head of Delegation and to coaches Mark Hebden, Adam Hunt and Loz Cooper for their brilliant support for the teams.

BOOK REVIEW - Gary Lane

Play the Accelerated Dragon by Peter Lalić

Published by Everyman Chess - 176 pages, £15.99

The idea of learning the Sicilian sounds quite a task considering the number of games played by masters so English author Lalić provides an easy to learn repertoire for the player of the Black pieces. The Accelerated Dragon (1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 g6 5.Nc3 Bg7) has been popular with top players for some time, so it has that merit of approval but crucially this entertaining book provides fifty games to provide model examples of how to handle the common positions arising from the opening. The book is perfectly suited to improving players or those who want to have a choice of a different opening because it assumes you have little knowledge of the line and sets about providing useful pointers on how to learn about the new set-up and standard positional ideas. Lalić provides a friendly, chatty style to guide the reader although sometimes I wonder if everyone will welcome such a matey conversation. For example: 'The isolated c-pawn certainly isn't pretty, but it does a useful job- a bit like the maid in the sitcom Two and a Half Men.' I know that a decade ago an editor would have crossed out a popular culture reference but now it is all the rage and in particular the successful American chess author Cyrus Lakdawala often uses them. The author plays the opening himself so his enthusiasm is obvious and his own games are also a useful guide on what to expect White to do at the next weekend tournament. There are a lot of tricks and traps associated with the opening and every possible mistake by White is gleefully demonstrated. This is what you really want when starting out with an opening as it could be a shortcut to success and Lalić does a good job of pointing out Black to play and win scenarios.

Anyone keen to understand the Accelerated Dragon will be well rewarded.
